FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

NEW YORK WOMEN IN FILM & TELEVISION AND FASHION GROUP INTERNATIONAL PRESENT
“FASHION AND THE FIRST LADIES”

An in-depth look at fashion as a communication tool throughout history and politics in celebration of Women’s History Month

NEW YORK, NY – March 8, 2021 – New York Women in Film & Television (NYWIFT) and the Fashion Group International (FGI) are proud to present “Fashion and the First Ladies” on Friday, March 12, 2021 at 1 PM EST in celebration of Women’s History Month!

In this hour-long virtual program, industry leaders Fernando Garcia (Co-Creative Director of Oscar De La Renta), Valerie Steele (Director and Chief Curator of The Museum at the Fashion Institute of Technology), and Carson Poplin (Fashion Historian) will discuss the iconic looks from U.S. First Ladies of government in a candid conversation about how our First Ladies are fashion trend setters. The panel will explore how fashion plays a role and communicates in history, politics and contributes to the making or breaking of public policy. Archival images and current looks from recent First Ladies dressed by Oscar de la Renta will be featured. The conversation will be moderated by The Washington Post Senior Critic at Large, Robin Givhan.

“The U.S. First Ladies have been at the forefront of social change, from Abigail Adams’s declaration to ‘remember the ladies’ to Michelle Obama’s advocacy for public health and education – and their fashion choices often played a critical role in establishing their personality, their message, and their power. NYWIFT is thrilled to dive deep into the role fashion plays in media and communications as we celebrate Women’s History – this month and every month,” said NYWIFT Executive Director Cynthia Lopez.

“The fashion business plays an essential role in our economy, while also being a powerful form of communication and expression. We are delighted to host this discussion on “Fashion and the First Ladies” as we discuss their unique style statements, how it has evolved and what the future holds.” says Maryanne Grisz, President & CEO Fashion Group International. “In celebration of Women’s History Month, and since 1930, FGI continues to provide a network and a forum to educate and create awareness for the important, impactful roles women play in the fashion industry and the world.”

"Oscar adored the opportunity to work with accomplished women, finding role models and leaders such as Secretary Clinton, Mrs. Bush and Dr. Biden particularly inspiring. Like Oscar, Co-Creative Director Laura Kim and I relish the challenge of helping women lead their lives - especially if those lives take place on the world stage - with a tremendous sense of confidence,” said panelist Fernando Garcia, Co-Creative Director of Oscar De La Renta.

The program costs $10 for NYWIFT and FGI members; $15 for non-members.
See details and register at https://www.nywift.org/event/fgi-nywift-present-fashion-the-first-ladies-panel/
The Story of Fashion. Described in The Washington Post as one of “fashion’s brainiest women” and by Suzy Menkes as “The Freud of Fashion,” she was listed as one of “The People Shaping the Global Fashion Industry” in the Business of Fashion 500: (2014 to the present).

Fernando Garcia was born and raised in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic. Drawn to the creative field and fascinated with fashion at an early age, he went on to study architecture at the prestigious Notre Dame. He then found the opportunity to meet Mr. de la Renta to show him a book of his sketches. This led to an internship, honing his craftsmanship skills and ultimately becoming principal designer. During his six years at the brand, Fernando helped to create some of the most iconic evening pieces in the Oscar de la Renta collection. Fernando began his career at Oscar de la Renta, working at the company from 2009 until 2015 when the pair left to found Monse. Fernando returned to the house as Co-Creative Director, debuting the Fall 2017 collection in February 2017.

Carson Poplin is a fashion historian, archivist, and writer based in New York City. She holds a Master of Arts from the Fashion Institute of Technology in Fashion and Textiles Studies: History, Theory, and Museum Practice, and a Bachelor of Art from Furman University in Art History. She has worked with several U.S. museums and corporations on exhibition research and garment archival projects. She has also written numerous articles for both online platforms and academic journals, including the forthcoming “‘First in Fashion’: Michelle Obama’s White House Style, 2009-2017” in White House History Quarterly (Summer 2022).

Robin Givhan (moderator) is senior critic-at-large for The Washington Post. She received her Bachelor of Arts in English from Princeton University and a Masters of Science in journalism from the University of Michigan. In 1995, she arrived at The Washington Post where she began covering the news, trends and business of the international fashion industry. She also wrote a weekly culture column. In 2009, she began covering Michelle Obama and the cultural and social shifts stirred by the first African American family in the White House. From 2010-2012, she was special correspondent for style and culture at Newsweek Daily Beast. She returned to the Post in 2014 as fashion critic. In 2020, she was appointed senior critic-at-large. Givhan’s work has appeared in Harper’s Bazaar, Vogue, Vogue Italia, British Vogue, Essence, Elle UK, New York and The New Yorker. She has contributed to several books including Runway Madness, No Sweat: Fashion, Free Trade and the Rights of Garment Workers, and Thirty Ways of Looking at Hillary: Reflections by Women Writers. She is the author, along with the Washington Post photo staff, of Michelle: Her First Year as First Lady. Her first solo book, The Battle of Versailles: The Night American Fashion Stumbled Into The Spotlight And Made History, was published in 2015. It is a cultural history of the 1973 Franco-American runway extravaganza that altered the trajectory of the fashion industry. In 2006, she won the Pulitzer Prize in criticism for her fashion coverage.

Press Inquiries:

Katie Chambers
Community Engagement Director
New York Women in Film & Television
kchambers@nywift.org
(212) 679 - 0870